HAVE you ever lived in a school dormitory (宿舍)? Some students think living at school is interesting. Well, it's not as easy as you might imagine.

Last year, my parents decided to let me live at school. I was surprised to hear this decision. I could be in control of myself without my parents managing me.

However, when I first arrived, I got anxious about the strict rules. We have to study from 7 to 9 pm every day. We are not allowed to play with cell phones or go back to the dormitory to take showers during this time. Also, I argued with one of my roommates. These things made me feel upset and homesick. I just wanted to go back home.

On weekends. I went home. My mother talked to me. She comforted me, "Don't be afraid. Try to think about how to improve the situation." My mother's words cheered me up. None of my roommates had such problems. I should solve my own problems.

The next week, I tried my best to calm myself down and focus on(集中精力于) my work for two hours. It did not seem too hard. Then I talked with my roommates in a friendly way and made more friends. I realized everything depends on our own attitudes(态度). I began to enjoy the dormitory life.

Every time I struggle with difficulties, I always think about this special experience. It gives me courage to overcome them. Perhaps I have grown up through this.

IF you had billions of dollars, would you donate almost all of it to charity (慈善机构)? Well that's what Mark Zuckerberg, CEO and founder of Facebook, just said he would do.

Zuckerberg and his wife Priscilla Chan promised to give 99 percent of their Facebook shares to society throughout their lifetime. Right now that is about $45 billion (289 billion yuan), and they plan to donate the money to things like science and education.

Many billionaires(亿万富翁) have done similar things. Bill Gates, creator of Microsoft, made The Giving Pledge, which is where billionaires promise to gradually give away more than half of their wealth to charities. This started in 2010, and now 139 people from 15 countries signed up for it.

But giving back and helping others isn't just for big billionaires. People like Zuckerberg and Gates may have more to give, but people with less are doing it too. Especially around the holidays, people want to do their part and give back to people who are less fortunate than them. Schools may have food collections where people bring a few food items, and together they can make a big donation to places like homeless shelters.

People also host special events like concerts or runs to be creative while raising money. Regular people donate whatever they can to US charities like the United Way and the American Red Cross.

Then these charities are able to help US communities in different ways like education, health and improving(改善) the lives of the poor. These donations come together to make a big difference.

 - host special events to improve their own lives.
 - also would like to help the ones who are less fortunate.
 - hardly make donations to homeless shelters.
83. The underlined phrase “give away” is closest in meaning to_____.
- give up
 - return
 - let out
 - donate
84. Which of the following statement is NOT true?
- only rich people can afford to donate money.
 - Zuckerberg and Priscilla promised to donate most of their money.
 - Charities are able to help US communities in different ways.
 - The United Way and the American Red Cross are two charities.
85. What is the title of the passage?
