VI. Reading comprehension (阅读理解) (共 50 分)

A. Choose the best answer (根据以下内容, 选择最恰当的答案) (12 分)

You may have heard of people who are allergic (过敏) to seafood, smoke or pets. But did you know that some people were allergic to Wi-Fi signals?

Rachel Hinks, a 44-year-old woman from Britain, first found herself being allergic to Wi-Fi signals in 2015. She suffered from sickness, heart palpitations (心悸) and great pains in her head after she was exposed to Wi-Fi signals sent from wireless routers (无线路由器) and phone mast (信号塔).

Rachel has tried many ways to escape Wi-Fi signals. In the past six months, she either slept in her car or in tent which she had put up in woodland or in the fields. She has even tried sleeping in a shed.

Being completely tired, Rachel had no choice but to quit her job and moved 370 kilometers away from her home to escape at least fifteen phone masts near her house. She is now living in a small house in rural (乡下的) Wales. There are far fewer masts. However, the house, which belongs to one of her friends, is up for sale, so she has to move again soon.

Rachel is planning to move to a more rural area. She is also planning to buy a camper van (野营车) so that she can drive away from Wi-Fi signals whenever she is feeling uncomfortable. As she has no job and therefore no income, she has to raise money online. She is hoping to raise 15,000 pounds. So far, she has raised over 1,600 pounds. She still has a long way to go.

Therefore, in order to enjoy the ___75___ of being the first to reach the mountaintop, Phillip went to climb the mountain alone one night while the other mountaineers were sleeping.

Obviously, climbing at night wasn't a smart decision. But he still wanted to give it a try. After several hours' climbing, he ___76___ got to the top. How delighted he was to see the top a few meters forward! But he suddenly slipped and started to fall. At that moment, his entire life flashed before him.

While thinking about how close he was to death and how ___77___ he was, he felt the rope around his waist suddenly frighten around him. His body was hanging in mid-air.

He shouted, "Somebody help me!"

Suddenly, a low voice came from the valley (山谷), "Cut the rope!"

"What?" He couldn't believe what he heard.

"Cut the rope around your waist!"

It was dark all around, so he couldn't see his surroundings. He ___78___ to cut the rope but to hold onto it as tightly (紧紧地) as he could.

The next morning, when his fellow mountaineers found him, he had died of exposure to the low temperature, holding tight to the rope in his hands. But he was only ten feet ___79___ a big rock!

If he had cut the rope, he might have landed in a safe place, build a fire and ___80___ someone who passes by. Then he might have been saved. So sometimes giving up is the way forward.

If you are planning a trip to France in the future, you should be careful with the roads you take because some of them are very strange. Today we're going to talk about the Passage du Gois (格伊斯通道).

The passage du Gois in France is natural. People didn't notice the passage because it periodically (周期性的) flooded. It was f___81___ discovered by some local people in 1701. It connects the mainland France and a small island called Noirmoutier (努瓦尔穆捷岛). Now many people visit the passage every day. Some of them risk driving on it and others are just interested in watching it d___82___ under the water and come up from the water again. People can drive on the passage half an hour before and after low tide (潮汐). The passage can also be reached only d___83___ low tide which lasts about one hour.

Driving on the passage can be dangerous. Some drivers are caught in the tide because they drive at the w___84___ time. Besides, as the passage is covered with water for most of the day, it is slippery all the time.

To ensure the s___85___ of drivers and tourists, signs are put on both ends of the passage to tell people whether the passage is passable (可通过的) or not. There are also p___86___ which are set at intervals (每隔一段距离) along the passage for people to climb up when they get into trouble in the water. People are warned to drive slowly and make no stops on the passage. Also, they are not allowed to p___87___ their cars on the passage.

So are you also interested in the passage? Come to France and have a challenge!

D. Answer the questions (根据短文内容回答下列问题) (12 分)

For many high school students, studying abroad is for college students. But in recent years, more and more Chinese teenagers have chosen to do so.

Students from China make up about 42 percent of the international students at high schools in the US, according to the latest study by the Institute of International Education. So, what attracts Chinese high school students to study abroad? What is overseas life like? We interviewed several students. Take a look!

Pan, 15,
Moreau Catholic High
School in San Francisco,
California, US

In the future, I want to go to college in the US. Studying in high school here will help me get used to college life in the future. Also, I want to improve my English.

Studying here is not easy. Instead of exams like in China, we have more projects in class. For example, we have to make a PPT about a historical figure and then design a creative item for that person, such as a painting.

For me, experience matters. It's good to have the experience of living in another country. Unlike other international students, my parents accompanied me, which makes my life here much easier.

In Canada, I have more time to develop my interests. I can choose classes I like.

However, taking the entrance examinations to high school and college at home would be great. It's a shame that I have no chance to do that.

Zhao, 15,
Unionville High
School in Toronto,
Canada

Zheng, 14
Walsh Jesuit High
School in Cleveland,
Ohio, US

I want to try different cultures and education styles. Two years ago, I visited some famous universities in Boston, such as Harvard and MIT. The academic atmosphere (学术氛围) deeply impressed me. Every student seems to spare no effort on academics. I saw students doing morning exercise everywhere and I watched a football game. I found that school life in the US was colorful. So I decided to study in the US.

88. How many international students in American high schools are from China?
89. Why does Pan choose to study in the high school in the US?
90. According to Zhao, what is a shame for her?
91. How did zheng get to know about the studies of the US?
92. Among the three students, who gets the greatest help and support from her parents?
93. If you have a chance to study in a high school abroad, will you accept it? Explain with at least Two reasons.
