书面表达

11. 【答案】 This morning, I went to school by bike as usual. In order not to be late, I rode very fast and didn't take any notice of the car parked on the roadside. Not until the front wheel of my bike scratched the car did I bring myself back from the music in my headphones. It all happened in a flash, which made me rooted to the spot.

A few minutes later, having collected myself, I got off the bike and tried to work out a solution. It occurred to me that our teacher had told us to take responsibility for the consequences caused by our mistakes. Therefore, I plucked up the courage to leave a note with my sincere apology, my name and school address written on it, hoping that the owner of the car would contact me for the damages.

In the afternoon, the car owner came to school with the note and told my teacher what had happened. Instead of blaming me for the accident, both of them praised me for being a responsible and honest boy in the presence of all my classmates. I was happy that I did the right thing.

What I learned from this experience is that only when we are brave enough to bear responsibility for our mistakes can we have a clear conscience.
