On Monday, I stopped my car in front of my daughter Juliet's middle school. She jumped in the front seat, feeling down. She asked me to help her study for her science test.

"Dad, I need to memorize a unit about the Reproductive Cycle of Plants. And I can hardly make it."

"You know, memorizing seems like the best way to study, but in fact you can do better in tests if you work on trying to understand the material."

Juliet was open to my advice. It was Monday afternoon and we had two nights to study before the test on Wednesday. I suggested a plan. "Tomorrow night, you are going to teach the material to me. Tonight, read the unit. Prepare to teach."

Asking her to teach me was an unusual idea but I decided to do it. Studies show teaching somebody else is a very useful way to learn. Even if you don't do the teaching, the act of preparing to teach leads to more learning than just trying your best to memorize the material.

On Tuesday afternoon, Juliet sat down with her science book facing me and said, "Okay Dad, let's study." I wanted her to teach me. But false starts happened. I couldn't be too hard on her. So instead we started with me asking her some simple questions. She knew some but not others. When she didn't know the answers, I encouraged her to check the book.

She started checking things that didn't make sense. And she was actively trying to test her understanding. I was happy to see it. She wasn't memorizing; she was trying to make sense of things, which was exactly what I had hoped she would do.

61. Juliet felt down because _____
 A. she failed her science test
 B. she couldn't follow her teacher
 C. she had trouble memorizing a unit

 A. sad B. nervous C. worried D. patient
 65. The best title for the passage can be _____
 A. Learning from Teaching B. Preparing for Teaching

I'm not much of a crier most of the time. But recently when I was reading a book on a plane. I started crying. Of course, it came as a big surprise when tears came up, no matter how hard I tried, I wasn't able to control myself.

Oh no, not this now, I thought to myself. But even as the thought entered my brain, I felt the first hot drop of salty water coming down my face. I put my head down, hoping that I could go on reading.

In fact, the harder I tried, the more tears pushed their way out of my eyes. You could guess how surprised the man next to me looked.

I dropped my head in shame. He must think I was crazy. Maybe I could turn toward him, hold up the cover of the book and say in my crying voice, "I'm sorry, sir. It's just a really good book!" But I didn't say anything. Instead, I just put my head back against the seat and let the tears run. Do you know what decision I made while I was crying? My decision was that it was okay if he thought I was crazy. I'd rather be crazy than be the kind of person who wouldn't cry when the situation called for it or who wouldn't let herself feel anything at all.

I've been that girl who has spent so much time trying to make sure people didn't think I was crazy. But now I don't want to be that girl any more — that bored and sad girl. I'd rather be this girl who is able to forgive (原谅), love and act, even if it means being disappointed or being hurt again and again.

- A. she felt uneasy on the plane B. she was moved by the book
C. she is usually a crier D. she is kind of crazy

C. explained to the man beside her D. went on reading
68. As tears got out of her eyes, the writer did NOT _____.
- A. think about others' feelings B. drop her head shamefully
C. say sorry to anyone in a crying voice D. let her head against the seat
69. According to the passage, we know the writer _____.
- A. wouldn't let others feel anything at all B. lived a sad and boring life
C. wouldn't cry in any terrible situation D. decided to change herself bravely
70. The passage mainly tells us _____.
- A. what the writer thought about while she cried
B. why the writer cried hard on the plane
C. how the writer overcame herself and decided to change
D. how the writer tried to stop herself crying
