A black bear was in a dangerous situation when she fell off a 30-meter-high bridge. After a long day in California's Sierra Nevada mountains, the bear 41 thought she was taking a shortcut home. She was walking across the bridge when, suddenly, two cars 42 from both sides. There was nowhere to run, so the 43 bear jumped onto the rail and began to fall over the side.

Luckily, the bear pulled herself onto an arch(桥拱) under the bridge, but she was trapped there. A driver 44 the unbelievable scene and called 911. Robert Brooks, an animal control officer from the nearby town of Truckee, was sent to 45. He then called Dave Baker of the BEAR League — a group that helps bears in trouble. "He thought I was playing a joke on him," Brooks said.

Unfortunately, the sky was getting 46, so the rescuers(营救员) had to wait. Early next morning, the two men returned to the bridge with more volunteers. Amazingly, the bear was still there. They needed to rescue her quickly. Baker told everyone his 47 — they should hang a net under the bear, push her into it, and then lower her to the ground.

Firefighters volunteered to lower the 100-kilogram bear 48 she was in the net. Police officers closed the road, and when the 49 arrived, it was hung under the bridge. Then, an animal control officer shot a dart(飞镖) containing a sleeping drug into the bear's 50. Ann Bryant, head of the BEAR League, stood under the bridge. When the bear was sleepy, Bryant shouted, "OK, 51!" A volunteer rock climber used his feet to push the bear off the arch, right into the middle of the net.

The bear was gently lowered to the ground. When she 52 the ground, everyone cheered. Bryant and Officer Brooks guided the sleepy bear to a stream, where she could finally get a 53. "She just kind of lay down on her tummy and put her paws under her chin," said Bryant, "like a dog lying on the living room floor... only 54!" The rescuers then 55 all the people from the area and left the bear alone so she could sleep. Since then, no one has seen her. "I don't think she's going near that bridge anymore," Brooks said.

B

Can one paper bag change the world? Sarah Murphy believes it can and she tries to do something about it.

The seventh grader from Massachusetts, in the United States, decorates lunch bags for the homeless. She wants to bring hope to those people. The decorated bags, together with a lunch, will be given to homeless people in the town of Beverly, through a charity program.

To attract the help of more children, she reached out to a local library and made a program. They set up a coloring station in the library. Children may take a bag, draw and write a message of hope and leave it on the front desk. They can also take it home and return it after coloring.

The program began on the first Saturday in August and has taken off since then. Murphy bought 100 brown lunch bags and put them in the library. Children at the library have colored them. Murphy is so happy that she is willing to get more.

Murphy first heard about the charity program from her friends. She has great interest in charity. She once donated money to charities and made gift bags for seniors at her school. So she wanted to do something special.

A summer reading program she joined further inspired her with its theme, "Build a better world." After that, Murphy got the idea of coloring lunch bags and feeding the poor to make the world a better place.
