I really enjoyed our class visit to Mr. Smith's farm. It was my first visit to a real farm. The first thing I noticed was the smell. Everywhere smelled of animals. Then I noticed the noise. I could hear many noises that I did not know which animals made which noises.

During the day we saw sheep, pigs, cows and dogs and two old horses called Boris and Max. We also saw the farmer's tractor, which was driving up and down the corn fields.

But best of all was milking the cows. Farmer Smith asked me to try. I was worried, but after a bit I found it easy to pull the cow's udder and let the hot white milk flow down into the pen. I want to go back to the farm and do it again. It was a lovely day.

Walking home from school one day, I saw Dan, a kid from my school, on the other side of the road. I said to myself, "He must be a real nerd," as he was carrying a lot of books. As I continued walking, I saw a group of kids run into Dan, knocking his books out of his arms and pushing him so he fell over. So I ran over to help him, and as we were picking up his books, I saw tears in his eyes.

As I helped him stand up, I said, "Those kids are stupid." He looked at me and said, "Thanks." There was a grateful smile on his face.

We started talking and soon realized that we lived near each other. We talked all the way home. Dan turned out to be a pretty cool kid. We hung out all weekend and the more I got to know Dan, the more I liked him. Dan and I became best friends.

Over the next four years, he became more popular and in our senior year, Dan got the best grades in our class, and had to give a speech for graduation.

As Dan stated his speech, he looked at me. "Graduation is a time to thank the people who helped you survive those tough years — your parents, your teachers, but mostly your friends. Being a friend is the best gift you can give. I'm going to tell you the story." I just looked at Dan in amazement as he told the story of the first day we met. He had planned to drop out of school and run away from home that weekend. Dan talked of how he had emptied his locker so his mom wouldn't have to do it later and was carrying all his books home. He looked at me and gave me a little smile. "Thank you, I was saved. My friend saved me from making a huge mistake." Everyone looked at Dan in shock as he told us about his weakest moment.
