A

IN BRIEF

Buy fresh food online

Xiao Wei from Nanjing has not been to the supermarket since the outbreak started, according to People's Daily. Every day, she buys fresh vegetables, meat and fruit online. "It's convenient and I'm less likely to be infected (感染)," she said.

Fresh grocery e-commerce (电子商务) in China has seen quick growth during the outbreak. Missfresh, a grocery delivery (递送) company, reported that sales were 3.5 times higher than those of last year during the Spring Festival holiday, while sales by JD Fresh were 2.15 times higher, Xinhua reported.

People's new shopping habits might change the future of e-commerce in China. According to a survey by US market research company Nielsen, nearly 50 percent of people said they would be more willing to buy groceries online even when the epidemic (流行病) is over.

The end of 2019 and the beginning of 2020 have undoubtedly been a hard time. Diseases, earthquakes and forest fires have begun a new year like never before. While those of us in China have been asked to stay at home for a quiet winter, many Australians have been forced to leave theirs during a "hot and fiery" summer.

I've spent at least ten summers in Sydney, Australia. Unlike summers in Shanghai, the weather there is quick to change. A really hot day is usually followed by a few cool days and some rain. That's why the average summer temperature is only 26℃. This year, the average temperature was about 1.5℃ higher.

"1.5℃" – that's a number we have seen before. In 2018, the United Nations reported that we needed to keep temperature increases below 1.5℃. At the time, many of us didn't really understand what it meant. "It's just a number," we thought. Well, now we know.

The amount of fire and smoke in Australia this year has never been seen before. Over a billion wild animals have been killed. Anybody you talk to would say that these are the worst bushfires(森林火灾) they have ever seen. I was lucky and made it back to Sydney one day before the fires forced the roads to close. Thousands of others were trapped and had to be rescued by emergency services.

Our goal for the past few years has been to limit global(全球的) warming to 1.5℃. We now know what could happen if we didn't succeed.

61. The passage mainly tells us _____.

A. people in Australia had to leave their homes

B. the weather in Sydney is different from that in Shanghai

C. the bushfires in Australia were the worst people had ever seen

D. the temperature increase is dangerous to the earth

62. According to the writer, _____.

A. people in Australia suffered a lot before the end of 2019

B. lots of wild animals in Australia died in the fire last year

C. all Chinese were asked to stay at home for a quiet winter

D. the weather in Shanghai changes quickly in summers

63. In line 15, the underlined word "others" refers to _____.

A. people B. roads C. forest fires D. wild animals

64. The writer thought he was lucky because he _____.

A. had spent at least ten summers in Sydney

B. understood the meaning of "It's just a number."

C. had been back to Sydney before the roads were closed

D. was rescued by emergency services with others

65. The best title of the passage should be _____.

A. Only 1.5℃ B. Hard 2020 C. World Events D. Global Warming

When Martin announced that he was going to run the New York City Marathon(马拉松), his wife and children thought he was crazy: Martin weighed over 100 kilograms, smoked twenty cigarettes a day, and never exercised. However, he said he knew it was time to change his lifestyle forever, and the marathon was the perfect way of going about it.

Shortly before he decided to run the race, his 38-year-old friend Justin had a heart attack and very nearly didn't make it through bypass surgery(搭桥手术). When Martin visited him in the hospital, he thought of his own father. He lost him when he was young, and he suddenly realized that he was risking having the same thing happen to his kids.

As he heard his workmates talking about entering the marathon, he asked if he could join in. Everybody laughed. But when they finally understood that Martin was serious about it, they gave him lots of support and helped him work out a training schedule.

Everybody thought Martin needed to start running immediately. But the first thing he did was to start taking lots of walks around Central Park, and at the same time he started eating healthier food. He rediscovered that he perfectly liked fresh fruit and vegetables, and that he was actually quite a good cook. He started having proper meals together with his family instead of sitting in front of the TV with lots of take-out food. Within several months, he'd lost a lot of weight and was ready to start running.

Initially, he was only doing six miles a week, but the marathon organizers gave him a suggestion, "Run three days a week and increase the number of miles each week." He gradually noticed how it got easier every time, and his time got faster.

However, it was still very difficult on the day of the marathon, because there were a couple of times on the route when he really felt like giving up and going to bed. Nobody thought he'd manage it, but he did it in just five hours and raised five thousand dollars in sponsorship(赞助) for his children's school. Next year he wanted to do it under five hours.

66. What is the reading mainly about?

A. A helpful suggestion.　　B. A man with a great change.

C. A good cook can be a good runner.　　D. Less food leads to a better life.

67. Martin decided to join in a marathon mainly because _____.

A. Justin was seriously ill　　B. he wanted to make a better life

C. his workmates laughed at him　　D. his family didn't believe in him

68. It's clear that _____.

A. Martin's dad died of a heart attack

B. Martin used to have a bad eating habit

C. Justin was ill because he didn't exercise

D. Martin's children became rich after the race

69. The underlined word "Initially" is closest in meaning to "_____".

A. At the beginning　B. As he expected　C. To his surprise　D. In his opinion

70. We can infer from the passage that _____.

A. Martin will ask his children to join in the race

B. Martin will no longer watch TV with his family

C. Justin is willing to lose weight with Martin

D. Martin will keep on doing exercise
