Young people are often unhappy when they are with their parents. They say that their parents don't understand them. They often think their parents are too strict with them and they have never given a free hand.

Parents often find it difficult to win their children's trust (信任) and they seem to forget how they themselves felt when they were young.

For example, young people like to do things without much thinking. It's one of their ways to show that they grow up and they can deal with any difficult things. Older people worry more easily. Most of them plan things ahead and don't like their plans to be changed.

When you want your parents to let you do something, you will have better success if you ask before you really start doing it.

Young people often make their parents angry by clothes they want, the music they enjoy and something else. But they don't mean to cause (引起) any trouble. They just feel that in this way they can be cut off from the old people's world and they want to make a new culture of their own. And if their parents don't like their music or clothes or their manner of speech, the young people feel very happy.

Sometimes you even don't want your parents to say " yes " to what you do. You want to stay at home and do what you like.

If you plan to control your life, you'd better win your parents over and try to get them to understand you. If your parents see that you have high sense of responsibility (责任), they will certainly give you the right to do what you want to do.
