B

It was a New Year's night, I was an unlucky nurse who had to work on such a beautiful festival. When I was complaining (抱怨) about it, three people appeared at my desk - a tired woman and two children.

"Are you all sick?" I asked doubtfully because they seemed all right.

"Yes," the woman answered weakly and lowered her head.

But when they started to present their problems, things became unclear. One child had a fever, but his temperature was OK. The other child had an earache, but she could not tell me which ear hurt. It seemed that the mother was pretending (假装) to cough.

Something was wrong. But I only explained that it might take a while before a doctor could meet them. "Take your time, please," said the mother. I checked their charts (表格) - no address. Suddenly I knew, they were homeless while the hospital was warm.

The family huddled (蜷缩) together in the corner, smiling and talking with each other sweetly. Quietly, I went back to the nurses' station and told my partners what happened in the waiting room. The nurses' station suddenly came back to life. All the nurses went into action for "a New Year emergency (急诊)".

We took out our meals for our New Year "patients". We also put together oranges and apples as presents. We tried to exceed the needs of the family who only wanted a warm place on New Year's night. Later, the little girl kissed me and said, "Thanks for being our angel (天使)".

61. Before the family appeared in the hospital, the writer was very _____.
 A. proud B. unhappy C. pleased D. angry
62. The family came to the hospital because _____.
 A. they came to visit a patient B. they were all sick

- C. they were homeless
D. they came to visit the nurse
63. The nurses offered the family meals and gifts in order to _____.
A. make them feel at home
B. make them leave
C. make them feel quiet
D. make the nurses' station come back to life
64. What does the underlined word "exceed" in the passage mean?
A. 满足
B. 超出
C. 拒绝
D. 接受
65. From the story, we learn that _____.
A. homeless people often tell lies
B. a hospital is a good place to spend New Year
C. we should always be friendly and kind to those in need
D. it is a terrible gift for the writer

C

Two months ago, my husband's hands were badly hurt after an accident. Then we had to drive to the hospital to do the physical therapy (物理治疗) for his hands three times a week.

Today, when we were on our way to the hospital, we saw a young man standing in the strong and cold wind. We stopped and asked if he needed a ride. He gladly accepted and jumped into the back seat. His name was Dan and he wasn't going far.

As we drove him to his home, we noticed he had many large piles (堆) of cut wood in his yard (院子). We asked if he was interested in selling any. He said, "Oh, you can just come by anytime, even if I'm not here, just take all you want." We asked how much it would cost for a trunk load (一箱). He replied, "It's free. Take all you want. We have more than we'll ever use and we're hardly ever home. So just come by and get it anytime. Thanks for the ride and have a great day!"

We still wanted to pay for it and would only get it if someone was home, but he just kept saying what he already told us.

Dan just wanted to repay (回报) us with the wood, never knowing how much that would mean to us because my husband wasn't able to chop any for us this winter.

66. The writer's husband got the physical therapy at least _____ times when they met the young man.
A. 3
B. 8
C. 12
D. 24
67. What was the weather like when the writer met Dan?
A. Rainy and cold. B. Windy and rainy. C. Windy and cold. D. Sunny and warm.
68. What does the underlined word "chop" mean?

- A. cut B. make C. test D. build

69. What can we learn from the passage?

- A. When the writer met Dan, they almost arrived at the hospital.
B. The writer could take the cut wood anytime for free.
C. The cut wood of Dan's yard was used to sell to other people.
D. Dan knew the writer's husband's hands were hurt.

70. Which of the following can best describe the passage?

- A. All is not at hand that helps. B. The one helps those who help themselves.
C. Two heads are better than one. D. Do well and have well.
