A gift in a wrong place brings unexpected happiness.
 As I came to my new neighborhood, I had a good time meeting a few kind neighbors. For Christmas, I thought I would do 51 nice for each of the neighbors I knew. I sat down and counted and the 52 of them is nine, and I also knew where they each lived. However, I decided to 53 one more person to my list, the lady I met every morning when I drove down the street. She always gave me a sweet smile, but I had no idea where she lived.
 My gift idea was to make small 54 baskets and leave them on each of my neighbor's front porches(门廊) on the night of Christmas Eve. I kept the last 55 for the friendly lady, because I was still not exactly sure where she lived — 56 only the house where I met her each morning. Finally, I decided to put it there. My neighbors really enjoyed the baskets and 57 even came by to thank me. This morning on my way to work, I saw a thank-you card in the mailbox. It said, "Thank you for those lovely apples and strawberries you left on the porch of Toby. He died on January 19, but he never 58 talking about how nice you were. Because someone remembered him in his time of illness. He really enjoyed it."

I was very surprised. I didn't know who Toby was or that he had been 59 ill. I had left that nice lady's basket on his porch by mistake. I believe that Toby never expected to have that basket. I felt 60 that the nice lady did not get a basket from me this Christmas, but I did enjoy the unexpected happiness the gift had brought me.

this didn't stop Halloween fans from keeping the tradition 6. For example, Elizabeth Lusty from London thought out an idea for her two children. She and her neighbors put boxes of candy in the front of their houses. Then they planned a safe road so that children could take the candy without touching others. When children came to their house, they were really excited. Elizabeth said that if this pandemic(流行病) is over next Halloween, they 7 a big Halloween party.

Andrew from the US was also very 8. He and his 6-year-old daughter built a special chute(滑道) from their front door to the street, so they could send candy down the road to trick-or-treaters outside. The idea became so popular online that many people did the same. "This is something that the kids will like and not think of it as 'I am doing this 9 COVID-19', Beattie told CNN. "We are not only doing it for children but also for 10. We want to make our life more meaningful in such a hard time."

四、阅读表达

A) 补全短文 根据短文内容, 从短文后 A-F 选项中选出 5 个适当的选项补全短文。(共 5 小题, 每小题 1 分; 计 5 分)

As your schooldays start, you might feel a bit worried or nervous. You might feel kind of unhappy or angry. 1 But would your favorite superhero have these same feelings?

Behavioral (行为的) scientists studied what they call the "Batman Effect(效应)" in children. 2 Kids won't feel as much nervous as before if they think themselves like a strong person such as a superhero like Batman.

For example, if you feel nervous during an exam, try to think that you are Batman. You may find that you can get less stress(压力) from this situation and feel more confident(自信). 3 Thinking like to be strong makes us feel strong, and that carries over to how we act in real life.

4 Anyone who you like can give you power (力量) you need to get through difficult times, or tell you how to act in bad situations. Movie stars, famous painters, even our own parents - anyone can be our "Batman".

For example, when it comes to how I act with others, I like to turn to Mister Rogers for power. 5 I try to act the same way toward other people as much as I can and I will be happy with myself after I solve problems well.

- A. They found an interesting fact.
- B. These feelings are not fun for you.
- C. Some students even don't want to go back to school.
- D. But you don't have to believe in superheroes all the time.
- E. He is an actor and he is always friendly when acting with others.
- F. This can help you be away from bad feelings just like a superhero.

B) 完成表格 阅读下面短文, 根据其内容, 完成表格中所缺的信息。(共 5 小题, 每小题 1 分; 计 5 分)

A video of a man complaining (抱怨) to his child's teacher recently went popular online. In the video, the father said that the teacher didn't check his child's homework herself and asked him to do this job. "Isn't checking homework a teacher's job? If you can't do your job well, then stop being a teacher," the father said.

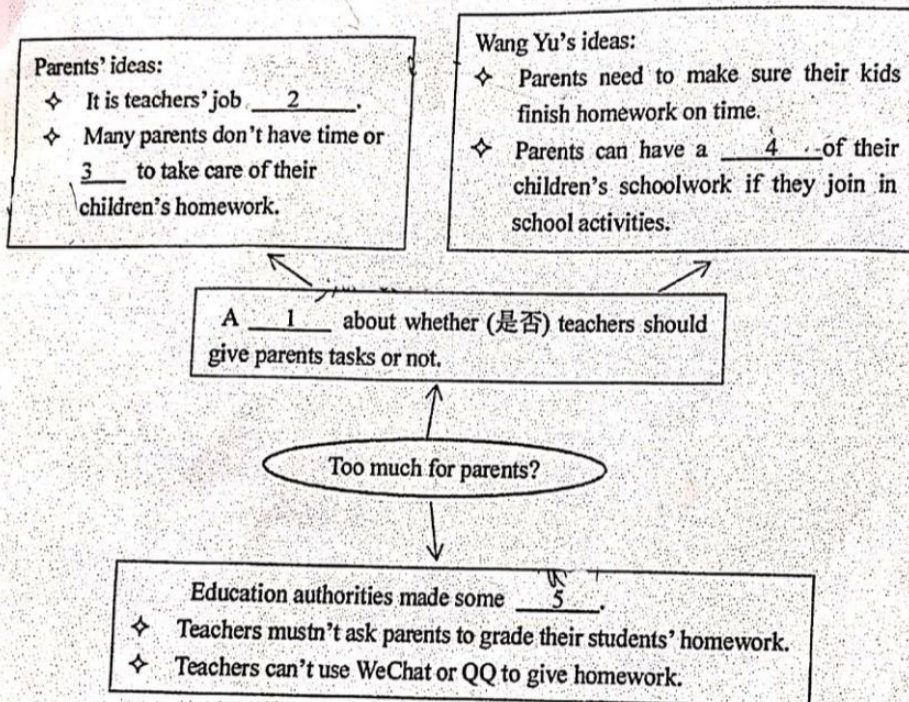

People tell their opinions online. These days, parents are caring more about their children's learning and they keep in touch with teachers through the use of WeChat groups. Many have found that some teachers are giving their work to parents.

For example, sometimes teachers put homework in teacher-parent WeChat groups, asking parents to tell their kids. "Teachers gave homework just in our WeChat group," one mother posted on Sina Weibo. "My kid didn't even know about it. I don't think that's the right thing to do!"

On November 11th, education authorities (部门) in Liaoning province banned (禁止) teachers from asking parents to grade their students' homework. They also added that teachers should not use WeChat or QQ to give homework, Xinhua reported. This move has been welcomed by parents and teachers. They have pointed out that many parents are too busy working to take care of children's homework. A number of parents can't even read Chinese words.

"Parents should make sure their kids finish their homework on time – and that's enough," Wang Yu, a high school biology teacher from Jilin province, told Global Times. Wang has won over 3.75 million fans on Douyin with his friendly attitude (态度) towards his students.

However, Wang added that it is necessary for parents to join in some school activities with their kids if they want to know about their children's schoolwork better.
