21 When it comes to competition and cooperation, opinions varies from person to person. Some people think that children should learn to compete, while others think that children should learn how to cooperate with each other.

For one thing, people who are for competition believe that only competition can help children defeat their counterparts. In addition, they think competition is the only way to lead to success. For another, some people hold different ideas. They insist that cooperation can build trust between each other and help to bring long-term relationship and that's what makes them useful to society.

In my opinion, children should learn about cooperation. Furthermore, since China put out the one-child policy, Chinese children are competing with each other drastically, what they are short of is cooperation. So, instead of competition, children should learn more about cooperation.
