Charles Dickens (1812—1870) was a British 1 who wrote beloved classics such as Oliver Twist, A Tale of Two Cities, David Copperfield and Great Expectations. He created some of the world's best-known fictional characters and is regarded as the greatest novelist of the Victorian era. His works enjoyed extremely high popularity during his life-time and his novels and short stories are still 2 read today.

Dickens left Portsmouth as a baby. His 3 childhood was spent in Chatham (1817—1822), a place which he often went back to in his fiction. He was born in a rather rich family. His father, a clerk in the navy pay office, was 4 paid. But he often 5 expensive things and did not have a skillful plan on finance. This often brought the family to financial embarrassment or disaster. Some of his failings and his excitements are dramatized in Mr. Micawber in the party autobiographical novel—David Copperfield.

David Copperfield is the novel that draws most closely from Dickens' own life. The story traces the life of David Copperfield 6 from a cheerful boy to a mature adult. When he is 7 enough to get married, many ups and downs of life begin to follow him. Readers can find many light-hearted moments, along with many unforgettable characters.

In 1824 the family reached 8. His schooling ended three years later when he was 15 years old. Then he was sent to manual work in a factory because his father went to prison for debts. These 9 deeply affected Charles. Although 10 this fall into the working class, he began to learn about the life of the working class and to show sympathy in his writings.

Deke Duncan is not an ordinary DJ. He's 73 years old and has spent the last 44 years hosting a radio show from his garden shed to a rather small audience.

In 1974, Deke Duncan created his own radio station in his garden shed. He used high-quality equipment to get that professional radio sound. This was well before the days of the Internet. The way to reach people with a radio show was by broadcasting it on radio waves. To do this, you needed a licence. Without one, he couldn't broadcast it anywhere outside his house. However, that didn't stop him from following his passion. Every weekend, his radio played pop songs and local news to only one person: his wife! His dream was to one day share his radio show with his home town, Stevenage. With only one listener, it seemed unlikely.

44 years later, this dream is going to come true. BBC Three Counties, a local radio station for Stevenage and the nearby area, heard of his story. They decided to give him his own one-off radio show. Deke Duncan will have a one-hour show over Christmas, playing not just to Stevenage, but to three counties. "This feels really nice. For the first time in my life, I'm speechless." he told listeners on the BBC Three Counties radio station.

Even though he has moved to Stockport, Deke has still kept his radio station going. He has hosted the show with friends and still broadcasts for his family. It just goes to show that a lifelong dream can come true if you work for it and keep going, even if it does take 44 years!

- (1) Where did Deke create his own radio station in 1974?

A. In his living room.	B. In his garden shed.
C. On the internet.	D. In the BBC County Radid Station.
- (2) What does the underlined word "it" refer to in Paragraph 2?

A. A licence.	B. A radio wave.	C. A radio show.	D. A radio station.
---------------	------------------	------------------	---------------------
- (3) According to the passage, when did Deke's dream come true?

A. In 2018.	B. In 2017.	C. In 1974.	D. In 1927.
-------------	-------------	-------------	-------------
- (4) Which of the following statements is TRUE?

A. Deke was too excited to say a word when his dream came true.
B. There were many ways to reach people with a radio show in 1974.
C. Deke had to stop his radio station because he moved to another city.

D. With the help of BBC, Deke had a show over Christmas only to Stevenage.

(5) What does the writer want to tell us from this story?

A. Never too late to mend.

B. Never too late to learn.

C. Never have a daydream.

D. Never give up your dream.

My 20-year-old daughter, Ann, living in Philadelphia, sent me a message the other day. "I need socks and shampoo." She was actually asking me to prepare those things for her, but I thought she was playing a cell phone game. I decide not to be a helicopter (直升机) mother, because experience as a mother and professor has taught me how badly that can result. Instead, I prefer a more hands-off way. From the time Ann turned 16, I don't want to know her work and life schedule any longer.

But that's not what I see at Drexel University where I teach. Most of my students talk to their parents three times a day or more. One student's mother called her son because she didn't hear from him for a few days. The son was in the library so he whispered "hello". The mother doubted that he was drinking, and insisted on asking him to take a picture of himself. Holding a newspaper with that day's date, the son had to take a photo of himself and sent it to his mother in order to prove that he wasn't telling a lie.

I always think that my students should depend on themselves. I tell them that I will not check whether they miss classes and finish homework or not. Because they are independent thinkers and they should take responsibility for their own choices.

But their parents don't treat them like me. I know a mother. She puts her eyes on her son too much. She hopes he will walk by the camera so that she can know what he is doing. Another mother checks her son's credit card daily. However, I never do that. My daughters only come to me with important things when they need my decision. I think that's because I give them space.

Many parents try to find if their kids are hiding from them. But we have to learn to respect boundaries (界限), even when technology is so powerful now. So I am going to do my best not to be a helicopter parent.

(1) The underlined phrase "a helicopter mother" in Paragraph 1 means " _____ " .

A. a mother who treats the child as an independent being

B. a mother who pays close attention to their children

C. a mother who prefers a more hands-off way

D. a mother who gives her children space

(2) What does the author think of the mother and her son in Paragraph 2?

A. They trust each other.

B. They respect each other.

C. They care about each other.

D. They are unhappy with each other.

- (3) Why does the author mention different ways of mothering?
- To show how responsible those mothers are.
 - To show that mothers should make decisions for their children.
 - To show that space is needed for children to become independent.
 - To show that some helicopter mothers love their children so much.
- (4) What's the attitude of the author towards helicopter parents?
- Agree.
 - Neutral (中立) .
 - Disagree.
 - Unknown.
- (5) What will probably be discussed after the last paragraph?
- Advice on respect boundaries between parents and children.
 - The powerful technologies for helicopter parents.
 - The disadvantages of being helicopter parents.
 - The advantages of being hands-off parents.

In 1994, a Japanese Masahiro Hara invented the Quick Response code (QR二维码) as a way to increase the amount of information that could be stored on a paper label. Before this, one-dimensional (1D) barcodes had already been used since 1974 when the first barcode (条形码) was scanned in a supermarket in USA. The first barcodes consisted of two parts: the barcode and the 12-digit number. But the two-dimensional

(2D) code made by Mr Hara can hold as much as 7, 000 digits or 4, 000 characters of text, including all Japanese characters. Many books have QR codes on their back cover which provide information such as the price, the author and the publisher.

Around 2006, Wang Yue and his team developed the Hanxin Code which can also encode Chinese characters. Short Hanxin Code, instead of long Chinese names, are now widely printed on the large quantity of shoes on trucks and ships. In 2014, Wang Yue's company produced its first self-service QR code reader—the Smart Box. Now it has become the most popular offline payment in China.

QR codes can be easily read with any mobile phone that has a camera so they are now widely used in factories and supermarkets, on various tickets and restaurant cashier tables. On 14 February, 2020, a QR code called 'Health Code' is used in Hangzhou for people to quickly report their health status. Firstly, find an app named Alipay and scan the QR code included. Secondly, provide your name, phone number and ID number. Thirdly answer some questions about your health status and whereabouts. Then you will get the 'Health Code' with different colour, green for "being healthy". Only with an updated green code. You may be allowed to enter or leave Hangzhou. On 21 February, 2020, a QR code is also used by Ms. Tang to inform her students about the course arrangement.

- (1) According to the passage, QR codes can be used in many places except _____.

- (3) According to the passage, which of the following statements is NOT TRUE?
 - A. Scan a Hangzhou Health Code and you will get a green code.
 - B. Scan a barcode of a popular book and you will know its price.
 - C. Scan a Hanxin Code and you can pay for the things you buy.
 - D. Scan a QR code of a book and you will get the writer's name.
- (4) What is the correct order of the following events?
 - a. Wang Yue's company produced its first self-service QR code reader.
 - b. Barcode was used and can be scanned in a supermarket in USA.
 - c. Masahiro Hara invented the Quick Response (QR) code.
 - d. Wang Yue and his team developed the Hanxin Code.
 - e. Ms. Tang published a notice on Course arrangement.
 - A. eabdc
 - B. dbace
 - C. cedba
 - D. bcdae
- (5) What is the best title for the passage?
 - A. The usages of QR codes
 - B. The inventors of QR codes
 - C. The importance of QR codes
 - D. The development of QR codes
